

Community College Statewide Degree coming soon:
Computer Information Systems - Health Informatics

Oregon's community colleges will soon offer an AAS degree in Health Informatics. With an emphasis on computer science, this degree trains students in information technology for health care environments.

Health Informatics is the rapidly developing scientific field that utilizes computer technology in the advancement of health care, and is one of the key components to creating an improved, higher-quality health care system. Individuals who earn this degree will be able to fill a variety of entry-level positions within any health care organization related to the use of technology in the management and delivery of health care services.
